Meet two students in the first NVRH CAP class

I went directly into the workforce after high school, doing mostly manual labor such as farming, as well as running my own landscaping business. I've been at NVRH for 4 years now, and have always contemplated getting into nursing but never really saw myself as a college student. It seemed intimidating to switch gears or go back to school as an adult. But now with the CAP program, I can continue to work at NVRH while starting a new career journey. That would have never happened without this opportunity.

Holly Charland, NVRH Maintenance Technician and Chief Gardener

As a Licensed Nursing Assistant at NVRH, I've seen firsthand how the nursing shortage has affected our little community hospital, creating longer wait times, and causing burnout. I want to become a Registered Nurse, but there's so few spots in nursing school, and it's insanely expensive. So I'm chipping away at it, one class at a time, which has been really challenging. Now with NVRH's new in-house training program, I will be able to finally accomplish my dream of becoming an RN right here locally!

Amber Grady, LNA, NVRH Palliative Care Clinic
