St. Johnsbury Pediatrics’ Dr. Elaine Stasny Retires

After 22 years of providing care to children in the community, pediatrician Dr. Elaine Stasny has retired from St. Johnsbury Pediatrics.

Dr. Stasny worked 10 years in Montana and New Mexico before she joined Dr. Mark Price, Dr. Karyn Patno and a nurse practitioner at Northeastern Vermont Regional Hospital in 1999.

“It was neat because I had been in residency with Dr. Price and Dr. Patno at UVM,” Dr. Stasny says. “They were both two years ahead of me, and at NVRH, we were on-call every third night and weekend. We didn’t get a break until we had a fourth person join us!”

HAPPY RETIREMENT DR. STASNY!

It’s National Breastfeeding Awareness Month!

Did you know that you can get the COVID-19 vaccine and still breastfeed? According to a new study, there is no sign of the Messenger RNA from vaccines against COVID-19 detected in breastmilk.

“We are seeing that breastmilk contains antibodies, which may help protect your baby from getting COVID-19,” says Dr. Kim Johnson, OBGYN.

To read more about this new study, click here.
The pediatrics practice has expanded steadily over the years, and Dr. Stasny along with the other providers worked through several changes, including a remodeling which gave them more space and updated rooms. Another change Dr. Stasny and the providers encountered in their work was an increase in mental health needs.

“We rarely see the severity of illness in newborns that we used to,” Dr. Stasny says. “We used to work much more with antibiotics, because that was the treatment that so many children and adolescents needed. Now we are much more involved with mental health concerns.”

An increase in mental health crises and suicidality, especially during the pandemic, has become a focus for St. Johnsbury Pediatrics. The practice, which sees more than 13,000 patients annually, added a full-time, on-site behavioral health specialist to its medical team. The practice has also received a COVID Relief Suicide Safer Care Mini-Grant to support suicide awareness and response training for staff, and is participating in the Vermont Zero Suicide Initiative. All patients ages 11 and up are screened for mental health challenges and substance abuse issues, and providers have access to an on-call child/adolescent psychiatrist.

“I know our community will find creative ways to address these mental health issues,” Dr. Stasny says. “The energetic young folks are stepping up to do amazing things.”

“Of course I’ll miss the families and I’ll miss the daily stimulation of the wonderful, smart team of providers and staff at our office,” Dr. Stasny adds. “But I won’t miss the pager going off when I’m asleep!”

Dr. Stasny is proud to have been part of the NVRH team.

“We have so much going on here that is the envy of our colleagues in other parts of the state and country,” she says. “I especially thank the Birth Center and our lactation specialists for their baby-friendly work and steadfast support of breastfeeding. Oh, and our Care Coordinators are the best!”

Dr. Stasny is a certified Nordic ski instructor and hopes to teach somewhere in the winters ahead. She also plans to continue playing oboe with the Vermont Philharmonic Orchestra, and other groups in the state.

“But first, I am taking a fishing trip to a remote river in Alaska,” she adds. “Hopefully I will bring home some delicious salmon!”

World Breastfeeding Week was Sun., Aug. 1 to Sat., Aug. 7

Artist and author of Emrysia: The Three Sisters Trilogy (Emrysia Awakening, Lament & Endurance), Cynthia DeKett (aka C.A. Morgan) is a 1982 cum laude graduate of Ferris State University’s Commercial Art program, and has studied independently under artists Margaret Tvedten, Pat Deadman and Stephen Huneck. In 1988 she completed instruction through the Institute of Children’s Literature in Redding Ridge, CT. A lifelong learner and champion dream chaser, she continues to grow as an artist and autodidact, and loves to encourage others to develop and contribute what only they may to the world.

Formerly, Ms. DeKett provided private art instruction for elementary school students in Harbor Springs, MI, and for various adults and local homeschoolers, as well as working in a variety of art related and teaching fields including: managing an art gallery, framing shop, kitchen & bath design showroom, and as head painter for the Stephen Huneck Gallery. For three years, she taught music to the students at Good Shepherd Catholic School, and is currently in her fourth year of teaching art there. When time allows, she works from home as a freelance & fine artist, writer & author. She is a staunch supporter of the arts and local libraries, having donated numerous hours painting scenery for Vermont Children’s Theater, as well as several pieces of artwork, most notably “The Baby Sitter” - an “illuminated” child-sized hardwood chair which fetched $4000 for the St. Johnsbury Athenaeum Charity Auction.

From northern Michigan to remote mountainside in Vermont’s Northeast Kingdom, she is equally at home on stage or in her garden, and loves sharing her gift of music in both church and hospice choirs. Current projects include: completing illustrations for her children’s book on the fears associated with diagnostic testing, which she hopes will raise funds for CHAD (Children’s Hospital at Dartmouth); rounding out her trilogy with a prequel and sequel (which she will also illustrate) and making art furniture. She and husband, Roger are enjoying a quieter house these days, raising their fifth child with occasional unsolicited advice from their four adult children.

“I specialize in portraiture, though lately have been playing with landscapes and floral paintings. Most of my time, of course, is spent preparing projects for my students with and emphasis on creatively upcycling materials. Nothing gives me more pleasure than turning something that would normally be discarded into a beautiful work of art.”

Rising Temperatures Impact Environmental, Human Health
By Katie Bocchino, Director of Healthcare Integration

This year the NEK has already experienced abnormally hot temperatures accompanied by high humidity. Hotter weather is something we’ve been experiencing more and more frequently. In fact, 2020 was the second-warmest year on record, and nine of the 10 warmest years on record have occurred since 2005, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Alliance.

These hotter temperatures are a result of climate change. “Climate change is the long-term impact on the air and water of the planet being caused by our introduction of certain gasses – greenhouse gasses – that are slowly warming up the planet and the oceans, and shifting the environment from its very stable position to a whole new arena that could become unstable, which would be an enormous threat to all living things,” said Dan Quinlan, Chairperson of the VT Climate and Health Alliance (VtCHA).

VtCHA is a group of health professionals concerned about climate change and its impacts, with a mission of using their expertise to inform the public and lawmakers about the effects of climate change on human and animal health.

“The U.S. is already seeing impacts of climate change: the forest fires, the heatwaves, the high-tide flooding,” Quinlan said. “It’s not a remote, next-century thing. It’s already happening and we need to get moving.”

The changing climate doesn’t just impact the weather we experience. It also impacts human health.

“Climate change is first and foremost a health issue,” Quinlan said. Climate change can cause increased risk of respiratory and heat-related illness, illness from contaminated water, food insecurity, poor nutrition and disease from insects.

In the extreme heat, like what we’ve already experienced twice this year, people can have difficulty breathing and suffer from heat-related illness including heat rashes, heat stroke and heat exhaustion. But climate change doesn’t just affect our summer temperatures, it affects our winters as well. Data from the VT Department of Health (VDH) shows that our winters are shorter, which Quinlan said impacts our insect population and our tourism industry.

Quinlan said NEK residents may be seeing a “tick infestation” due to warmer average temperatures, which can be extremely harmful to our animal populations. He said residents may have noticed a dwindling moose population, which scientists are attributing to increased numbers of ticks. A study conducted in 2017 – 2019 in Essex County found that winter ticks caused 74 percent of all mortalities in the moose population, according to the VT Department of Fish and Wildlife.

“People are starting to see what’s happening to the herds,” Quinlan said. He added that a thriving tick population puts people at greater risk of disease carried by ticks.

Winter temperatures are rising quickly in the northeast. According to the VtCHA website, the average temperature in Burlington has risen seven degrees Fahrenheit since 1970. Quinlan said VT is already starting to see the impacts of climate change on the ski industry, with shorter ski seasons, lower than average snow fall, and warmer days and colder nights, creating less than ideal ski conditions.

Warmer average temperatures will also have an impact on agriculture and food production, Quinlan said. Extreme differences between hot and cold temperatures are growing, he said, which will lead to more and heavier rain, which will increase the variability in the farming conditions that farmers will see.

Although VT may not be experiencing impacts of climate change as severely as other states, Quinlan said we are still seeing its impacts and we need to act quickly and do what we can to respond.

Quinlan said home weatherization is one way to address energy, health and environmental issues. VDH has a weatherization program designed to make homes for low-income households more energy efficient, which Quinlan called a “triple win.”

He explained that weatherizing your home significantly lowers energy costs, reduces greenhouse gas emissions, and can improve health and lower medical bills. He gave an example that weatherizing a home helps with issues such as mold and mildew and can provide cleaner air indoor air quality, which would create a healthier environment for someone with a respiratory condition.

When asked how NEK residents can help combat climate change, Quinlan said the first thing people can do is to contact your legislators.

“Phone calls and emails make a huge difference,” he said. “We have a lot of entities in the state who are working on these issues and they’re looking for public support.”

To find and contact your legislator, visit https://legislature.VT.gov/.

HEALTH CARE SHARE
Northeastern Vermont Regional Hospital is once again partnering with the Vermont Youth Conservation Corp to offer Health Care Share. Health Care Share is a farm-to-hospital public health program that connects Vermonters with fresh healthy local food.

Participants receive a large bag of locally grown produce each week for twelve weeks. The participants in the program were referred by their healthcare provider, by the NVRH Community Connections staff, or recruited by hospital staff. Thirty families are again participating this year.

According to Vermont Department of Health data, only 23% of teens and 18% of adults in Caledonia County get the recommended number of fruits and vegetables each day.

The food comes from farms in Vermont run by the Vermont Youth Conservation Corps. Each week during the growing season, the Farm Corps Members grow and pack vegetables and herbs for about 400 families in the Health Care Share program in Vermont.

The Health Care Share program is free to participants, funded solely by NVRH as part of the Community Benefits allocation. Each of the families served in 2021 represents a success. The 30 participants (with a total of 74 people) benefited from free, locally-grown vegetables and fruits, and nutrition education.

Auxiliary/Volunteer News

By Pat Forest, Director Volunteer Services & Security

Time to submit your Wish List items to the NVRH Auxiliary. Here is the criteria for the Wish List items:

The NVRH Auxiliary will begin the process of accepting Wish List Requests from hospital departments. All departments are qualified to submit a proposal for new equipment or services that would not be in their regular capital budget requests. These items cannot be for staffing positions, but can be used for equipment or services that would support patients and staff. The focus is always on the patients in determining which projects the Auxiliary will support.

Please submit a letter to the Auxiliary stating:

- What the equipment or service is for.
- How much it will cost to provide the service or purchase the equipment.
- How many patients will be served.
- How will the award impact your ability to provide service to the patients.

The Auxiliary rarely reaches out to the departments to discuss their proposals, so please be clear, concise and convincing in your proposals. If you have any questions, you can reach out to Pat p.forest@nvrh.org (x7310) or Lorraine (Auxiliary President) (626-8589 lomatteis@charter.net) for guidance on whether a particular piece of equipment/service would be something they generally would support.

The deadline to submit proposals is by the end of day on Friday, August 13, 2021. All proposals should be delivered to Pat Forest in Volunteer Services who will deliver all proposals to the Executive Committee of the Auxiliary. Good Luck everyone!

Education Corner

Submitted by Jaime Gadwah, Central Clinical Education

Education continues to roll along, we are busy making big plans for the fall. We completed a survey to all nurses – thanks for your responses! The biggest requests were education on pediatric mental health and cardiology! Each choice we gave had some interested though so I think we’ll have plenty of topics for lunch n’ learns – stay tuned!

We held a phlebotomy class this month which went great. An IV class is scheduled for August 12, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., please sign up in Elsevier if you’re interested. We continue to offer AVADE trainings twice per month (your supervisor can sign you up) and CPI classes once to twice monthly (you can sign yourself up).

We are making plans for the LNA annual mandatory skills week for either August or September, which should be lots of fun. The nursing annual mandatory skills week was held July 19 through 23 and was very successful.

The nursing education department is working on upgrading and improving our New Nurse Residency program at NVRH with a Transition-to-Practice module from Elsevier. This is something that is so beneficial to our hospital and our patients.

There is no education calendar for August yet – we are working with IS to get the education calendar onto the Pulse Page – stay tuned for more information on that!

New Pulmonologist joins NVRH

Dr. Brittany Duchene, pulmonary and critical care physician, joins Northeastern Vermont Regional Hospital. She is also an assistant research professor at the Larner College of Medicine and has completed a Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine fellowship at the University of Vermont.

Dr. Duchene did her internal medicine residency at Medstar Harbor Hospital in Baltimore, Maryland and went to medical school at Aureus University School of Medicine in Oranjestad, Aruba. She also holds a bachelor’s degree in science from Laurentian University and a master’s degree in science from York University.

Her clinical interests include obstructive lung diseases, including asthma and COPD. Her research interests focus on asthma associated with obesity. She is a critical care provider as well. With her addition to the Pulmonology clinic, NVRH can now continue to provide patients care locally, as Dr. Duchene is able to navigate acute issues.

“Before patients went to Dartmouth or UVM. Can take care of patients here now. This adds support to the hospitalist services – support them, back them up with resources as a team.”

CELEBRATING SUCCESS

Left: Kasey Putvain, LNA and Terry Littlefield, RN both earned certification as Child Passenger Safety Technicians during July. Kasey and Terry both work on the Birth Center and are passionate about newborn safety and educating parents on car seat safety and proper use. To become a Child Passenger Safety Technician, one must attend a four day training and pass the certification test, which includes both a multiple choice exam as well as hands-on skills verification.

Congratulations to both on this achievement!

NVRH offers tobacco cessation course

Eight week intensive supports participants beyond their quit day

To offer more support to those who wish to quit smoking, Community Connections at Northeastern Vermont Regional Hospital (NVRH) will be offering Freedom From Smoking, a group course designed by the American Lung Association. The course, which is free for Vermonters, starts on August 31 and runs until October 12, 2021.

If you are ready to quit nicotine, Freedom From Smoking can help you take action by giving you the skills and tools for success. The curriculum is designed to build your confidence up to week four, your quit day, and provide you extra support through another four sessions.

Because most people already know that smoking is not healthy, Freedom From Smoking focuses on how to quit, rather than on why. According to the American Lung Association’s Freedom From Smoking webpage, the program uses pharmacology and psychology to help tobacco users control their behaviors. It also acknowledges that there are many methods to effectively quit, and therefore the program includes a variety of evidence-based techniques.

Approximately 15% of adults in Caledonia County smoke. And most of these people likely know that smoking causes cancer. But there are other ways that smoking can affect health. For example, smoking has been connected to blindness, type 2 diabetes, erectile dysfunction, ectopic pregnancy, rheumatoid arthritis, gum disease and even fertility issues.

Freedom From Smoking has been helping participants quit for over 35 years and has helped hundreds of thousands of individuals live healthier lives. The American Lung Association webpage claims that those who participate in Freedom From Smoking are six times more likely to be smoke-free one year later than those who quit on their own. When used in combination with other cessation techniques, up to 60 percent of participants report having quit smoking by the end of the program.

“Because the program offers an evidence-based approach to quitting, it really supports you in changing your behavior,” program facilitator and NVRH Tobacco Treatment Specialist Lynn Goulding says. “Take the step towards better health today!”

This Freedom From Smoking is an intensive eight week group course facilitated by NVRH Tobacco Treatment Specialist Lynn Goulding. The first virtual class will be 1:30 – 3:30 PM on August 31, 2021. To sign-up for this program, please contact Jen Grant at 802-748-9405, ex. 1026 or jennifergr@nchcvt.org.
